2. Synthesis of communications

Main introductory and cross-disciplinary points raised

M. Didier ROBERT, President of the Regional Council of Reunion, opened the plenary session by emphasising the importance of cooperation actions in a geographic space like the Indian Ocean. He welcomed the fact that the 2007-2013 programme ended with a rate of implementation of 98% and the dynamics applied to the 2014-2020 programme, with a programming rate of over 30% at the end of 2017. Finally, he reminded those present of the challenge of coordinating different sources of funding, notably EDF and ERDF funds, in order to contribute to the coherency of European policies.

M. Daniel GONTHIER, Deputy President of the Departmental Council of Reunion, gave credit to the support given by the Interreg program for training activities such the one organised by the Centre International d'Etudes Pédagogiques, aimed at applying an inclusive teaching methodology for Mauritian pupils. These projects also make it possible to promote the French language through the training in French of future teachers. He also mentioned the Indian Ocean image bank project, presented during the visit, which had been selected through an appeal for projects and which offers a concrete example of the link between partners of the programme around a shared topic, such as the preservation of cultural heritage.

Mr Jacques BELLE, General Director of protocol, legal and consular affairs of the Department of Foreign Affairs of the Republic of the Seychelles, noted that as regards Cooperation, the year 2018 will be of particular importance for his country, with the Seychelles entrusted with the Presidency of the IOC in March, as well as the signature of the Interreg framework agreement with the Regional Council of Reunion. In this respect, he reminded those present that cooperation is one of the principal axes of the strategy of the Seychelles and pointed out that, following the invitation made by the President of the Regional Council of Reunion, Mr FAURE, President of the Republic of the Seychelles, is to visit Reunion in 2018.

Mme Shakuntala JUGMOHUN, Head of Cabinet of the Minister of Foreign Affairs of Mauritius, welcomed the signature of the Interreg framework agreement in October 2016, signed with the Regional Council of Reunion, representing the achievement of a fruitful process of intense exchanges between Reunion and Mauritius. It will also give a new impetus to cooperation between the two islands and more generally relations between France and Mauritius, which have a long history and are characterised by mutual respect. Finally, Mrs JUGMOHUN proposed carrying out an analysis of the process of communication around the Interreg program by the partner countries.

M. Mahamoud SOILIH, Ambassador of the Union of the Comoros, gave credit to the fruitful exchanges observed during the Interreg monitoring committee. He reminded those present that the axes of the programme fully correspond to the objective of co-development sought by the partners. Finally, Mr SOILIH welcomed the signature of the framework agreement, which will give a new dynamic to relations between France and the Comoros.

Mr Sidi MOHAMED, Deputy President in charge of European affairs and regional cooperation of the Departmental Council of Mayotte, first of all reminded those present that the European ambition of creating a peaceful and prosperous space is perfectly applicable to the challenges of the Indian Ocean zone.

Mr MOHAMED also welcomed the positive progress made by the programme, both as regards the number of operations programmed, and through the quality of the projects. The recent programming of the first file presented by a beneficiary of Mayotte is a very positive sign and an encouragement to carry on making efforts in the field of communication.

M. Pierre Emmanuel LECLERC, geographic reporter of the Regional Directorate for the European Commission, speaking about the progress made in the programme, noted that the delay is due to the late approval of the programme, that is has been completely compensated for and that a dynamic process has now been engaged, with the perspective of achieving a programming rate of over 30% for the end of 2017.

Mr LECLERC indicated that discussions are currently on-going concerning the period following 2020. The difficult context due to Brexit and the budgetary constraints consequences might lead to caution concerning the amounts available for the future of politics of cohesion. However, the European union reasserted its commitment to a strategy for the European Outermost Regions at the conference held in Cayenne during which a communication for a strengthened partnership with the European Union was approved and the need to adapt the politics to the specificities of the European Outermost Regions was underlined.

Mr Amaury DE SAINT-QUENTIN, Prefect of Reunion, welcomed the organisation of the committee, associating the partners of the programme, as well as the involvement of Mayotte. The Prefect emphasised the fact that, during the conference on the European Outermost Regions, the President of the Republic insisted on the importance of regional cooperation. The European policies of the Interreg programme are part of the national strategy applied by the French state in the fields of security, economic development, as well as protection of the environment.

Mr Henry RABARY-NJAKA, Minister of foreign affairs of Madagascar, reminded those present that cooperation between partners in the Indian Ocean is essential, since they share the same history and have strong links as regards their settlement. In addition, the partners are all situated around the same ocean, which creates a priority challenge for development. Mr RABARY-NJAKA emphasised the importance of maritime security, which must be placed at the heart of strategic priorities. Mr RABARY-NJAKA also brought up another important challenge for the partners of the programme, that of food security and the necessary development of the agricultural potential and resources through research and development in agronomy, set out in the different axes of the programme.
